

Todd J. Wagnon

Counsel

Todd Wagnon’s practice focuses on resolution of complex design and construction disputes on industrial, commercial and government projects in the United States and abroad. He has advised and represented prime contractors, owners and developers in pursuing and defending claims for changes, delays, disruption, differing site conditions, and design and construction defects during all phases of the disputes process. Through his involvement with government construction projects, he has experience addressing not only the traditional construction claim related issues but also the complex and unique legal questions that arise when contracting with the government. In addition to litigating matters in state and federal courts, he has extensive experience in resolving disputes before domestic and international arbitration panels.
